

To transfer a text file from Macintosh to PC

Application Note #21, 5/1/1998

Most Macintosh text files can be opened with Windows software; without translation.

Also, a common method of moving a text file from a Macintosh to a PC is as follows:

- 1) Place a floppy into Macintosh and format using the PC FORMAT (select Erase Disk).
- 2) Run the "Apple File Exchange program" and translate the text file from Macintosh Format to PC Format. Or, open the text file with Word or Excel, and save it in the Word or Excel formate and then open it with Word or Excel on the PC, and then Save As Text.
- 3) Transfer this file to the PC Formatted disk.
- 4) Insert this disk into the Windows computer and open the file.
